Arsenal are set to take on Paris Saint-Germain in this year’s Champions League final, setting up a big clash against the defending champions.

PSG booked their place after a dramatic semi-final win over Bayern Munich, edging it 6–5 on aggregate. They secured a narrow 5–4 victory in the first leg in Paris, then held on with a 1–1 draw in Munich.

This final also brings a bit of history with it. The two sides met at the same stage last season, and PSG came out on top with a 3–1 aggregate win over Arsenal.

The final is scheduled for May 30 and will be played at the Puskás Arena in Budapest.
