

Local hip hop stars Jay Polly and Amag are set to perform in Kampala for the first time ever. The concert will take place in Light club in Kampala and Rwandan deejay Alur will be on the decks.

Speaking to this website, rapper Amag the black confirmed the news. “It’s time to show case to the region the real Rwandan touch of hip hop, the concert is real and it will take place next month,” says Amag

The concert is slated to take place on 9th July and Ugandan singers Keko, Pallaso will grace the stage to mixed with local music. This is a big step to local hip hop which is popular in the country but artists never cross to the region to do shows like artists doing other genres.

The show dubbed Rwanda-Uganda this will be the second show in Kampala in this year for Rwandan artists to stage after a successful Rwanda-Burundi night that took place at Cayenne early April.
