

Estonia reiterated, on Tuesday, its support for the autonomy plan, presented in April 2007 by Morocco, to settle the Moroccan Sahara issue, describing the plan as a “good, serious and credible basis for an agreed solution between all parties,” while “encouraging other governments to join this position.”

This announcement was made by Estonia’s Minister of Foreign Affairs, Margus Tsahkna, during a press conference following talks in Tallinn with Morocco’s Minister of Foreign Affairs, African Cooperation and Moroccan Expatriates, Nasser Bourita, who is paying a visit to Estonia — the first by a Moroccan foreign minister to the country.

This support for the autonomy plan comes amid growing international momentum, driven by His Majesty King Mohammed VI, for Morocco’s sovereignty over its Sahara and the Autonomy Plan.

Estonia’s position aligns with the spirit of the United Nations Security Council’s most recent Resolution 2756, which welcomed the positive momentum and urged efforts to build upon it.
